LOTTO Hessen extends its partner network

New partner GI Tech Gaming provides a tablet solution for scratch ticket sales

Wiesbaden, 09/15/2014. From the beginning of next year, lottery players in the state of Hesse will be able to purchase scratch tickets via off the shelf tablets. The technology, that initially will be available at petrol stations, is developed and delivered by the new cooperation partner GI Tech Gaming.

"After a thorough evaluation of several bids, we are glad to announce that we selected GI Tech Gaming with their partner Gaming Solutions to supply software and hardware for extension of our network", says LOTTO Hessen's managing director Dr. Heinz Georg Sundermann. "We will be able to use standard tablets to sell scratch tickets at our retailers which constitutes a very innovative process that does not exist in Germany's gaming market yet."

GI Tech Gaming is headquartered in Chennai, India, and has been a trendsetter in the Indian gaming industry since its inception. Having powered more than 35000 lottery and gaming terminals globally, GI Tech Gaming has delivered its state of the art gaming content and lottery technology in some of the most challenging environments globally and has pioneered in innovative delivery channels through terminals, the web, tablets and mobiles.

The Norwegian company Gaming Solutions has comprehensive experience from the Nordic markets, a part of the world known to be good in balancing high lottery turnover with responsible gaming.
